WorldBlu Selects Greenleaf Book Group as One of the Most Democratic Workplaces

April 10, 2012 (Austin, TX): In recognition of the sixth annual “Democracy in the Workplace” day, WorldBlu honored 48 organizations that have been certified as the most democratic workplaces of 2012. For the second year in a row, Greenleaf Book Group was chosen for the list, which features for-profit and non-profit organizations based around the globe and includes such well-known companies as Zappos.com, DaVita and the WD-40 Company.

WorldBlu was founded in 1997 with the goal of seeing one billion people employed in workplaces that encourage freedom-centered leadership and democratic design. The organization has a high standard for certification and uses employee surveys to evaluate ten principles, which include transparency, accountability, choice, integrity and decentralization. Greenleaf Book Group is honored to be recognized once again as a company that embodies WorldBlu’s vision.
