Greenleaf Book Group is Named One of the Most Democratic Workplaces WorldBlu certifies 52 organizations worldwide

April 8, 2011 (Austin, TX): In recognition of the fifth annual “Democracy in the Workplace” day on April 12, 2011, WorldBlu named Greenleaf Book Group among 52 organizations that have been certified as the most democratic workplaces of 2011. The list features for-profit and non-profit organizations based around the globe and recognizes such companies as Groupon, Zappos.com and WD-40.

WorldBlu was founded in 1997 with the goal of seeing one billion people employed in workplaces that encourage freedom-centered leadership and democratic design. The organization has a high standard for certification and uses employee surveys to evaluate ten principles, which include transparency, accountability, choice, integrity and decentralization. “Our people are our number one asset, and we’re honored to be recognized as a company that embodies WorldBlu’s vision,” says Clint Greenleaf, Greenleaf Book Group’s founder and CEO.

WorldBlu has now either certified organizational members or has individual members in 55 countries worldwide, up from just four countries when it first began.
